

Mike's choice

Mike likes to hunt for moose. He is spending the week at a cabin in the woods with his family. He has his hunter's certificate and, like the other members of his group, he also has a valid hunter's licence for the zone in which he wants to hunt.

Each day, at dawn, Mike and his father go far into the woods in the hope of encountering a moose...

Four days go by without them encountering a single moose.

On the fifth day, Mike sees a female moose. He knows that the regulations prohibit hunting female moose in this zone.

Since they cannot kill this moose, they go back to the cabin, once again empty-handed.

Still confident, the group returns to the hunt on Sunday. It's their last day.

But once again, no moose.

